Distributor of the Year

WINNER: DEMESNE ELECTRICAL

In another well-deserved win, Demesne Electrical scooped the award for Distributor/Supplier of the Year. Our judges felt that Demesne's dedication to work with only the best electrical control and switchgear manufacturers made them a firm customer favourite. Brothers Noel and Cyril McLoughlin founded the company in 1977 in a bid to connect the electrical industry in Ireland with top European brands and product developers.

Key to their vision was building not just a distribution ecosystem, but a network of strong human relationships. With Demesne's headquarters in Dublin the company expanded in 1985 opening a distribution centre in Cork and later in 1999 a centre was opened in Dungannon in response to strong customer demand in Northern Ireland and UK.

Demesne's continued success reflects a culture based on embracing innovation and recognising opportunity and investment in people. Judges praised Demesne's commitment to continually improve their service to their customers and to be recognised as a company that is "easy to do business with".

The judges were also keen to learn about Demesne's podcast which is another fantastic way they connect with their customers. An excellent win for the team with the panel congratulating the team on their commitment to continue to improve their services to customers.
